PHI ALPHA THETA

The Department supports the campus chapter of Phi Alpha Theta, the international Honor Society in History. To be eligible for membership, an undergraduate must complete at least twelve semester hours in history, with a 3.1 average in history courses taken, and a 3.0 overall GPA excluding history. A maximum of 3-credit hours of online, transfer, or AP credits may be counted towards membership eligibility. Phi Alpha Theta, with chapters on college campuses in all fifty states, as well as Washington, D.C., Puerto Rico, Canada, and the Philippine Islands, is one of the most respected honor societies in the country. Its student members are eligible for one of a number of prizes and scholarship awards annually.

Initiation is held each spring for eligible students. Letters of invitation are mailed in early February. For more information, contact the Department of History, 236 John Munroe Hall.

HISTORY CLUB

The object of this organization is to assist fellow students in research, enhance our own analytical skills and promote the appreciation of history within the student body of the University of Delaware. Membership is open to all full-time, matriculated undergraduate students at the University of Delaware who agree with the purpose and object of the group. Visit the History Club website to learn more.

Duggan    Limit 77    MWF 9:05-9:55
Epidemics slaughter people far more effectively than wars (WW1 - 18 million vs. 50+ million for the Great Influenza of 1918-19). Using William McNeill's classic Plagues and Peoples, this course will closely examine how societies in the past have explained and dealt with rampant killer diseases, e.g. the Black Death. Students will also do disease histories of their own families or of famous, well-documented families (e.g., the Medici of Florence) and investigate closely how one historic society understood and combated a particular disease.

HIST 190.010: HISTORY OF THE FUTURE
Beyer    Limit 40    M 6:00-9:00
How have scientists, engineers and technological visionaries imagined the future? How do films and other forms of popular culture, such as comic books, fiction and television reveal society’s hopes and anxieties about those visions? Weekly film showings, lectures, reading and other class activities to explore these fascinating questions.

HIST 200.010: HISTORY & GOVERNMENT OF DELAWARE

HIST 268.012: SEMINAR: RACISM & SOCIAL EXCLUSION, A GLOBAL HISTORY
Rawat                  Limit 15                W 3:35-6:35
This course satisfies the University’s DLE requirement.
This course will introduce students to the institutional practices of social exclusion practiced in much of the world in the 20th century. Racism is the most visible form of exclusion in the world by there exists in the world forms of segregation that have stigmatized large swath of population in various parts of the world on the grounds of occupation like the Untouchables in India and Japan. We will make a typology of such excluded groups through case studies in the United States, Brazil, South Africa, India and Japan. We will examine the role of “radical internationalism” in building global alliances, connecting organization in Africa, Asia, Brazil and the U.S., to challenge the ideologies and practices of racism and social exclusion in the 20th century. Yet, we will also explore the promises and limitations of such global alliances on the struggles of socially excluded groups in the south.
Fascism, communism, and to a lesser degree, anarchism, seemed to offer efficient and rapid solutions to the economic, social, and political troubles created by World War I and the Great Depression. For that reason, these ideologies captivated the imagination of many Europeans during the 1930s. However, the radical nature of their solutions took European politics to the brink of armed confrontation. This seminar will explore the developments that led up to that polarization through the study of the Spanish Civil War (1936-39) and the rise of the Nazi Party in Germany. Students will write a research paper based on a variety of primary sources available at the University library and the Internet.

This course satisfies the University’s DLE requirement.

This course is designed to build a mature understanding of how the life circumstances and prospects of people with disabilities are shaped by the tenor and content of entrenched attitudes, barriers and representations of bodies. Since technology is so closely related to disability, this course introduces a critical framework for understanding how technologies can reveal individual experiences with disability, notions of citizenship, gender, sexuality, identity and accessibility. Applying a “hands-on” material culture approach, we will examine different technologies to analyze how medical and prosthetic technologies enrich, marginalize or stigmatize people with disabilities. We will also historicize concepts such as “impairment vs. disability” and “ableism” and examine how medical ideas reinforced “acceptable norms” for bodily behavior and how this approach was challenged by people with disabilities.

This course satisfies the University’s DLE requirement.

This course explores the meanings of “ethnicity” in 20th-century American history. The idea of ethnicity in the United States is intimately linked to the histories of race relations and immigration, both of which this course will consider in detail. Once employed to describe marginal groups of recent immigrants and their descendants, ethnicity has become a proud marker of family heritage, or “roots”. In addition, this course aims to teach you about the craft of historical research and writing as a foundation for success in the history major. We will engage in a collaborative public history project, creating a course website with examples of ethnic artifacts and your historical interpretations of their contexts and meanings. Section 032 counts toward the Jewish Studies minor.
HIST 270.010: HISTORY OF MODERN ASIA
McLeod Limit 40 MW 3:35-4:50
This section satisfies the University’s DLE requirement and the History Department’s Asian, Latin American or Middle Eastern requirement.
Using lectures, discussion, images, music and readings, the course explores the intertwined histories of three Asian countries: China, Japan and Vietnam from c. 1600 to the present. Emphasis is on the impact of imperialism; the two World Wars and anti-colonial revolution in shaping contemporary Pacific Asia.

HIST 280.010: GLOBAL ENVIRONMENTAL HISTORY
HIST 280.080: GLOBAL ENVIRONMENTAL HISTORY
Buckley Limit 35/5 TR 2:00-3:15
Environmental historians examine the impact of climate, landscapes and other species on human history and the ways in which human societies have in turn altered these elements of the natural world. This course will consider some of the major developments in human history over the past several centuries, such as European imperial expansion and the industrial revolution, through an environmental lens. In what ways did natural factors constrain or impact choices that historians have often interpreted as being primarily political or cultural? How have human communities impacted natural history through economic systems, energy use, warfare and other dynamics? How can we expand our understanding of human history by taking a range of non-human factors into account? How can studying environmental history help us to meet the significant environmental challenges of the present? HIST 280 emphasizes the global interconnectedness of environmental resource use as well as the impact on human societies, landscapes and political relationships of resource access and energy flows.

HIST 291.010: WOMEN’S HISTORY THROUGH FILM
HIST 291.080: HONORS SECTION
Laberge Limit 20/5 HIST Seats M 7:00-9:00
Explores women's historical experiences through the medium of film. Students will view and discuss a variety of documentary films on women and read materials related to topics covered in the films. HIST 300.010: WOMEN IN AMERICAN HISTORY
Instructor: TBD Limit 27 HIST Seats MWF 9:05-9:55
The position of women in American life viewed from a historical perspective including such topics as home and family life, women in the work force, women as agents of social change and feminism. This course is cross-listed with WOMS300.
This course covers the history of the United States from 1825 through 1861. We will look at the emergence of political developments during the “Age of Jackson” looking at the increasingly democratic politics, for white males, that rose in these years; including the rise of the Second Party System. We will also study cultural and social changes such as the reform movements spawned in part by the Second Great Awakening and other cultural developments such as Transcendentalism. We will look at the rise of the belief in “Manifest Destiny” and the consequent expansion of the United States across the North American continent. We will see the growing presence of the slavery issue, discussing the growth of the abolition movement and the emergence of slavery as the main national issue by the 1850s and the consequent breakdown of the Second Party System as well as the ultimate division of the United States after the presidential election of 1860.

*Honors students are expected to utilize at least two primary sources in preparation of the two papers assigned in the course. Such primary sources may include newspaper, pamphlets or documents available in the on online resources or Special Collections at the Morris Library. In addition, honors students will meet with the instructor to discuss those primary sources.

Examines United States history from 1914-1945 and focuses on three topics: the causes and consequences of American intervention in the two world wars; social and cultural change during the 1920s and the age of the Great Depression and New Deal.

Today the language of buying and selling is prevalent in nearly all aspects of American society, from education and elections, to healthcare and the allocation of natural resources. In this course we will explore the ideas and impact of both proponents and critics of this phenomenon as it has developed over the last 150 years. Our work will take us across a wide range of topics including marketing, advertising and the rise of social media as way to understand more abstract concepts like commodification, cultural capital and globalization.

The American colonies and the new nation from 1760-1789 with an emphasis on political and cultural developments in the age of the American Revolution.
HIST 321.010: CIVIL WAR AND RECONSTRUCTION
Bendler    Limit 35    MWF 12:20-1:10
HIST 321 is an examination of the history of the United States from the late 1840s into the 1870s. We will first examine the growing divide between North and South up to the election of Abraham Lincoln as President in 1860, culminating in the secession crisis following Lincoln's election. We will then look at the war years (1861-5). While this course is not strictly a military history, we will examine the impact of some of the major battles and military campaigns on policy decisions in Washington and Richmond. In addition, we will carefully examine how war objectives changed through the four years of fighting. Finally, we will study the Reconstruction era (1865-77), and the debates over restoring the Union and the rights of former slaves.

HIST 324.010: AMERICAN CONSTITUTIONAL HISTORY
Rise    Limit 20    MWF 10:10-11:00
This course will examine the historic contest that have emerged in the United States when the values of constitutionalism, rooted in the rule of law, have clashed with the values of democracy rooted in majority rule. We will contrast the formal expressions of constitutional principles, emanating from the U.S. Supreme Court, with the competing interpretations of presidents, legislators, civil libertarians, laborers, dissidents, religious believers and other activists. Our discussions will emphasize three broad areas of constitutional change: federalism, judicial review and presidential powers.
This course is cross-listed with CRJU 324.

HIST 326.010: AFRICAN AMERICA HISTORY SINCE THE CIVIL WAR
Hicks    Limit 15    TR 2:00-3:15

Through readings, lectures, discussions and film, the course will address: the process of emancipation; Reconstruction; Jim Crow segregation and radical violence; black cultural production; the modern black freedom struggles and black life in the 21st century.
This course is cross-listed with AFRA 306.

HIST 327.010: TOPICS IN JEWISH HISTORY: JEWS & FOOD
Horowitz    Limit 15    HIST    MW 5:00-6:15
This course satisfies the University’s multi-cultural requirement.
This class surveys how food kosher law and cuisines from around the world have sustained the Jewish people for more than 3,000 years. It does so by exploring the many foods associated with Jews, as well as how kosher rules influenced the foods used in religious rituals and in daily home consumption. It will range widely over time and space, following the movement of Jews and changes in their foods from the ancient Middle East to modern America. It will include discussion of iconic Jewish foods such as falafels and bagels, the special forms of meat and wine that kosher law required and the surprising acceptance by Jews of non-Jewish cuisines such as Chinese food. This course is cross-listed with JWST 327 and counts toward the Jewish Studies minor.

HIST 328.010: AMERICAN CAPITALISM SINCE 1815
Johanningsmeier
Limit 35
MWF 1:25-2:15
America’s rise to world power in the 19th and 20th centuries is very much tied to its emergence as the world’s most dynamic and productive industrial economy. This course will provide a close examination of some of the most important economic, political and social influences and effects of industrial capitalism on American history. Particular topics include: the origins and development of technological change; the changing roles of labor, business structure and reform; management theory and practice; social protest and alienation; race relations in the context of labor and capital; family life; gender roles and population change; advertising and consumerism and the “military industrial complex.”

Both sections satisfy the 2nd writing requirement for the College of Arts and Sciences and the History department’s African, Asian, Latin American or Middle Eastern requirement.
This course introduces students to select topics in Latin American history and culture through film, documentaries, readings, class discussion and lectures. We will use films as a window to delve into the region’s history and as a motivation to learn more about it. Topics include: the legacy of colonization; the revolutions of independence; the process of state building in the 19th century and the struggles for political, social and economic modernization of the 20th century.

HIST 357.010: THE EUROPEAN CITY
HIST 357.080: HONORS SECTION
White          Limit 25/5     TR 2:00-3:15

The course aims to understand the development of modern urban culture in Europe by looking at the social and cultural life of two of its greatest cities. Focusing on London and Paris since about 1750, we will see how the rapid growth of these cities, capitals of powerful imperial nations, created opportunities and problems in equal measure: the elegance in which the rich lived and the vibrancy of each city’s cultural life frequently contrasted with the miserable conditions endured by the poor, and such unglamorous problems as how to dispose of garbage and the dead. With the aid of primary sources (including film), the course aims to build up a full picture of the evolution of cities in the modern world.
Following the French Revolution, Jewish life throughout Europe and the United States underwent significant changes with respect to legal equality, civic rights and religious reform. This course will focus on the ways in which Jewish history transformed and was transformed by the experience of modernity. This course is cross-listed with JWST 363 and counts toward the Jewish Studies minor.

Both sections satisfy the History department’s African, Asian, Latin American or Middle Eastern requirement. Section 013 satisfies the 2nd writing requirement for the College of Arts and Sciences.

This course examines World War II through the lens of Japanese analysts and observers. The course treats its subject in three chronological parts: origins, human experience and history and memory. Beyond thinking about WWII as an episode in Japanese, or U.S. history, the course also locates events in East Asia in world historical context. In the interest of exploring its global dimensions, the course moves beyond “us vs. them” dichotomies to explore world historical themes such as militarism, nationalism, imperialism, total war and racism. Each week, the course examines a historical source(s) that addresses the themes above using oral history, monographs, edited volumes, documentary films, reportage and essays.

This course introduces students to modern Chinese history from 1600 to the present. It provides students with insights into several issues that significantly influenced modern Chinese history with the aim of understanding what China was in the past, what China is today, and what China might be in the future. The course chronologically examines China’s changes in order to illustrate a dynamic image of China that has dominated the East Asian world for centuries. Students will explore the rise and prosperity of Manchu-ruled Qing dynasty; China’s decline with the coming of Western powers in the 19th century; China’s transformation into a modern nation-state after the nationalist and communist revolutions in the first half of the 20th century and the People’s Republic of China’s rise since the second half of the 20th century.

This course surveys the complex historical development of the South African society. Starting with a description of the African societies before the arrival of Dutch settlers in the 17th century, this course traces the evolution of a racist society under Dutch and then British administrations. Important topics to be covered include: African resistance to white expansion; wars of resistance; impact of agricultural and labor laws
This course is cross-listed with AFRA 397.

HIST 400.010: HISTORY CAPSTONE SEMINAR: U.S.-CHINA RELATIONS
Wang Limit 15 TR 3:30-4:45
This seminar explores U.S.’ relations with China from 1784 to the present. It discusses how the U.S. and China became enemies from friends during the past two centuries through some major historical events that have had profound political, diplomatic, military, economic, social and cultural impacts on American, Chinese and East Asian history. These events include: U.S.-China tea trade and commercial treaties; Chinese immigration to the U.S. and Chinese Exclusion Act; the Burlingame Mission to the U.S.; American missionaries in China; the Open Door Policy; the Boxer Indemnity Scholarship; the Chinese Civil War and Taiwan; the Korean War and U.S.-China conflicts; the Cold War; the American motion to drop A-bombs on Communist China; Ping-Pong Diplomacy; the Tian’anmen Square Massacre and China’s U.S.-oriented globalization. No prior knowledge of Chinese history is required.

HIST 400.020: HISTORY CAPSTONE SEMINAR: CROSS-DRESSING, IDENTITY & GENDER IN HISTORY
Montaño Limit 15 TR 2:00-3:15
The seminar will use plays, novels, memoirs, movies and more to examine the construction and development of gender distinctions from antiquity to the present. The readings and discussions will be particularly concerned with the transgressions of gender roles and conventions, with recurring reference to the “meaning” of femininity and masculinity. The wide array of sources, genres and historical periods is intended to foster comparisons and analysis of the differences. This course will focus on questions of identity and gender and NOT sexuality or sexual preference.

HIST 400.030: HISTORY CAPSTONE SEMINAR: MODERN U.S. POLITICAL ECONOMY
HIST 400.080: HONORS SECTION
Alchon Limit 15 T 3:30-6:30
In its larger and oldest sense, political economy marries historical inquiry and social criticism. This seminar seeks to do much the same as it introduces the American debates over authority, power and democratic possibility, particularly as these have developed since the advent of corporate capitalism. The "managerial revolution;" the idea and significance of the middle class; the problems posed by meritocracy and by inherited privilege and the questions forced by the American imperium are among the topics to be covered.
A group of 12th graders wrote an article for the The New York Times: “You might wonder why people should care about disability history if they do not have disabilities themselves. The truth is that over time, disability will affect the lives of most Americans” (5 Sept 2018). This seminar investigates the historical variability of disability and the lived experiences of people with disabilities to offer new interpretations of classic themes in American history, including gender, race, class and activism. Topics include: “freak shows,” medical diagnoses and treatment, perceptions of normalcy, eugenics programs, charitable initiatives, technology and prostheses, civil rights, immigration, wars, the workforce and the idea of progress. This course is dual-listed with HIST 667.

HIST 667.012: SEMINAR: BLACK ACTIVISM & PRINT CULTURE IN THE 19TH CENTURY AND THE DIGITAL AGE
Foreman Limit 6 T 2:00-5:00
Black activists of the 19th century are called abolitionists so routinely that it goes unmarked and unnotice. Yet the anti-slavery movement dissipated as the Civil War ended while many reformers, Henry Highland Garnet, Frances E.W. Harper, Frederick Douglass and Mary Ann Shadd Cary for example, remained active into the 1880s and 1890s. This class re-centers Black activism in relation to the Colored Conventions Movement, whose genesis predates the antebellum abolitionist movement and continued, indeed grew, in scope and force after the Civil War. We will sometimes pair literature published in African American newspapers with conventions. David Walker’s Appeal’s print history is connected. We will consider Harper’s Minnie’s Sacrifice alongside the 1873 Delaware Colored Convention for which Harper was the keynote speaker and complement. We will also be reading current criticism such as the just released The Practice of Citizenship: Black Politics and Print Culture in the Early United States by Derrick Spires and Birthright Citizens: A History of Race and Rights in Antebellum America. By also engaging issues of digital and public histories, the class also looks forward in its consideration of the past. We will examine databases that bring maps and visualization to the study of African American history. In addition to reading articles about how the digital humanities encounters historical recovery efforts, we will discuss and revise digital exhibits on the convention movement and consider projects such as Digital Harlem, The Race and Slavery Petitions Project, the Trans-Atlantic Slave Trade Database and Visualizing Emancipation. UD’s The Colored Conventions Project will provide an important hub.
Indeed, instead of final papers, students will be invited to curate their own exhibits or will have the opportunity to work with scholars to create exhibits that extend from their forthcoming essays in the first edited collection to examine this movement. This class is designed so that (novice and digitally experienced) students will leave it with critically analytical and hands-on experiences with cutting-edge research methods demanded on the job market today. This course is cross-listed with ENGL 667.

HIST 680.010: STUDIES IN WORLD HISTORY: HISTORY FROM BELOW
– SEMINAR ON HISTORICAL METHOLOGLY

This course introduces students to methods of researching and writing history that intervene within dominant historical frameworks. Postcolonialism, as a field of study emerged as part of a wider effort to write “histories from below” in the context of the global South. Combining diverse disciplinary methodologies, these initiatives explored the stakes involved in writing histories of non-elite “subaltern” groups (peasants, workers, women and marginalized groups) by challenging the dominant frameworks built around notions of class, capitalism and nationalism; categories which emerged specifically from western European experience. At the heart of postcolonialism is a plea to interrogate the historical assumption of a homogenous (European) future for us all. This course will assess the impact of “histories from below” and “subaltern studies” on the writing of history and will address the following themes: race and slavery; subaltern groups and movements; gender and women; colonialism and nationalism and democracy and the public sphere. The objective of the course is to encourage students to integrate new approaches into their research agendas.

HIST 693.010: PROBLEMS IN TEACHING HISTORY & SOCIAL STUDIES

MSST 467.010 / 667.010: LEADERSHIP BOARDS & SENIOR STAFF
Battisti Limit 6/6 F 1:25-4:25

(1-credit short course – 3/1/19 to 3/29/19)
This course aims to give future non-profit employees a look at finding success in the challenging yet rewarding non-for-profit sector. We will look closely at leadership and the ways in which a senior staff, director and board member keeps his institution viable. The readings and presentations in class will be amplified by the appearance of practicing Board members, Executive Directors and senior staff that will relate their experiences. In five classes we will explore the traits of a fully functioning Board of Trustees; discuss the elements of leadership and the reasons why some organizations succeed, and others struggle. The course is designed for students that aspire to executive level positions at non-profit organizations such as museums and public gardens. The information provided will also be helpful to those serving on boards, active volunteers and persons with a general interest in the mechanics of building philanthropic potential.
